A prediction market for malaria elimination: harnessing the wisdom of crowds to inform health financing and policy

Abstract

Here goes some abstract text. Bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla bla .

Introduction

Public health interventions targetting malaria - and their corresponding cost-effectiveness evaluations - most often pertain to the public sector. Accordingly, the analytical framework and …

Some text goes here.

All data processing and analysis were carried out in R (R Core Team 2017). All code is freely available online (Brew 2017).

Results

Some text goes here

Discussion

Some text goes here

References

```
2+2
```

Brew, J.R. 2017. "Positive Externalities in Malaria Elimination." GitHub Repository. https://github.com/joebrew/maltem_externality; GitHub.

R Core Team. 2017. R: A Language and Environment for Statistical Computing. Vienna, Austria: R Foundation for Statistical Computing. https://www.R-project.org/.